Police Nab Trio After Cafe Brawl

Three men were arrested and booked for assault with a deadly weapon Monday after they allegedly were involved in a fight at Joe's Cafe, 813 Van Ness Ave., in which Lewis Jose, 24, of 16307 Gramercy Place, was beaten unconscious by assailants.

The trio, including Ramon Escobar, 31, of 185 232nd Place, Wilmington; Louis Flores, 34, of 1432 W. Carson Blvd.; and Frank Grajeda, 678 16th St., San Pedro, were taken into custody by Torrance police after they were called to the cafe.

Witnesses said three men left the cafe after a fight in which Jose was severely beaten about the head. Police stopped a car containing the three suspects at Cabrillo Avenue and Carson Street for questioning and noticed a substance resembling fresh blood in the three men.

Although no weapon was found in the suspect's auto, police arrested the men for the fight and beating of Jose at the cafe.

Don't Let Poor Driving Habits Endanger Your Holiday Outings

If you ride other people's bumpers — in other words, follow too closely, you're tailgating. And if you tailgate, you're not saving time (seconds maybe — but not real time). You are, though, displaying your ability to be a poor driver. You are endangering your life and the lives of your fellow motorists.

In so many words, tailgating is dangerous business. Maintaining a safe following distance in front of you is not weak-seated advice. According to the Auto Club of Southern California, 30 per cent of all freeway accidents are rear-end collisions and 20 per cent of all traffic injuries are caused by following too closely.

There are two rules of thumb to determine a safe following distance: one car length for each 10 mph you are traveling or multiplying your speedometer reading by two and keeping that many feet behind the car in front of you.

At times in heavy traffic like that which may be encountered over the July 4 weekend, maintaining a safe following distance in front of you may be difficult. Other drivers may cut into that space you have made for yourself. Patience and common sense are necessary at such times. The intelligent thing to do is to drop back a safe distance again.

Because a safe following distance affords you a broader field of vision, you are better able to size up the traffic conditions ahead. Not only do you have a better chance of stopping in time in the event of an emergency, but you also lessen your chance of being hit from behind if you don't have to stop so abruptly. Remember, too, that when moving back into line after passing a vehicle not to cut in too soon. The other driver needs a safe following distance too. Check his position and be able to see his car in your rear-view mirror before returning to your lane.
